

Creative Family Games

Monday, June 2, 2008

In our home we are a creative family. We enjoy games and activities that stimulate our imaginations. Think-ets is a game in which you collect small trinkets. You can play the game while traveling, at home, for parties, and just to take along with you. Perfect for those long doctor visits, or traveling to Grandmas house. I think the game would be perfect for a fun activity in a classroom as well. Think-ets is game created for all ages, are takes two or more people to play. It's designed for ages 8 and up although I think younger children might enjoy them as well.

So now that we know what Think-ets are how do we play with all of the cute trinkets? There are many games to play but I will just give you one so you can get the idea.

The game "What's Your Story?" is one of my favorites. Something all children could do. First, lay out five or more trinkets. Then choose one and start a story using the trinket as the subject. Ask the other player(s) to do the same until you and the players have woven an entire story.

One other tidbit you should know: Think-ets encourage silliness! It's a fun game for everyone and our family has enjoyed playing this so far. I can't wait for our daughter to be able to play right now she thinks the trinkets are for her Barbies. This is a game she can play with all of her friends as she gets older. We could even find small trinkets at stores and add on to the game. With Think-ets anything is possible!
